Opening: Sean Kennedy "successpool" at Rachel Uffner

Joseph Cornell meets Bladerunner in this hot LA artist's contemporary juxtapositions. Mr. Kennedy really maxes out the gallery with wall, tabletop and ceiling works, but he's also pushing his concept of "collage" to the next level by using two- and three-dimensional images and objects from investment banking, probiotics, Pop Art, an Asian airline, energy drinks, a 1970s cartoon, breath mints, the U.S. military, the chemical industry, the auto parts industry, a convenience store. The "successpool" houses test tubes, light bulbs, fence gates, a butcher's carcass diagram, Cup O' Noodles containers, trash, suds pails, photographs, fake French fries, a hamster cage, ear plugs, Play-Doh cups and more.
